

COOLING WINDS

(Neil Murray/Kev Carmody)

The summer it was long and the heat kept up for weeks
I was nearly all dried up and you got itchy feet
I tried to keep us focused and I tried hard to mend
And then one night I just let go, you took your chance and fled
And I was wishing you had stayed 'cause the heat was bound to end
When the cooling winds of autumn blow out here again

The photos of yourself you left them on the shelf
I know you didn't want them they're for me to think about
Could there be something else you might have left behind?
Something you might be needing at some time?
For I wish I could've held you a little longer than I did
'Til the cooling winds of autumn had blown out here again

Well I see you in my dreams and you're doggin' all my days
With that look of sorrow on your face I couldn't take away
Well did someone hurt you when you were just a child?
Well I swear if I ever found who did, they'd pay for their crime
There might have been a way to take our pain away
But the cooling winds of autumn didn't blow here on that day

The weeks pass by so slowly and the months turn into years
It'll still be from you that I long to hear
When I think of how we parted I still can't work out why
We loved each other hard enough you'd think we'd be all right
Well have you found a place where quiet waters dwell?
And do the cooling winds of autumn blow out there as well?
